Nothing else has worked – so Starmer and Reeves are finally telling the truth about Brexit | Rafael Behr

Guardian (Politics) · Wed, 22 Oct 2025 05:00:56 GMT

It is the right way to go: leaving the EU has been a disaster. But refusing to admit it has cost Labour precious time and credibility The UK government is trying out a new Brexit stance, not to be mistaken for a change in policy. The shift is tonal. Previously, Keir Starmer and Rachel Reeves talked about Britain's deta

The axe will have to fall on Britain's runaway public spending

City AM (News) · Wed, 22 Oct 2025 04:57:00 +0000

Rachel Reeves likes to insist that she will never play fast and loose with the public finances. It's a phrase she deploys quite often, not least when it looks as if the bond market could do with a bit of reassurance, and it means that she won't breach her cast iron fiscal rules.

Performance, not privilege, should determine success in financial services

City AM (News) · Wed, 22 Oct 2025 04:21:00 +0000

Financial services leadership is still too dominated by a privileged few, says Lord Mayor Vincent Keaveny When I served as Lord Mayor of London, I often heard the City described as a meritocracy. Yet, behind the polished façades and success stories, I saw the hidden barriers that still shape who truly gets
